Dear Ms Monson,

I am just writing you a short note in praise of Mr Feroz Bhimani and barrister Mr Henry Vallance (re.  case). I managed to accumulate 15 points on my driving licence so I was looking at a six month driving ban which would have had dire consequences as needing the car for my work of estate agency I would have lost my job and flat. However, with these men's skills I 'escaped' with a ban of six weeks which purely meant my colleagues could cover me for this short period.

However, what really impressed me most about Mr Bhimani and Mr Vallance was that they both seem to genuinely care about the consequences I may have faced. I am an estate agent, therefore I am very good at feigning compassion but I felt both men had a heartfelt tone in their tone of voice and also (in Mr Vallance's case) demeanour. At my final result (after they both finished their work) they both looked and sounded more happy, relieved than I was! So, I would gather if they both are so involved in their work this would confirm their effort; diligency to other people's cases, not just mine.

Once again, thank you so much and I have no hesitation in recommending these people and your firm to other people who find themselves in such trouble.
